

1 1. In Cambodia, the government has made little progress
2 in its efforts to reopen the Mekong River, and the chances
3 are slim that it will succeed in time for the next resupply
4 convoy tentatively scheduled for early March. Khmer Communist 5 forces are increasing pressure in the countryside and against 6 the capital's southwestern defenses guarding the approaches 7 to Pochentong. A general war weariness and weakening of will 8 is evident within the FANK forces, and we believe the military 9 situation will continue to deteriorate. In this situation, 10 it is not possible to predict the course of events over the 11 next few weeks. There is a considerable danger that the 12 Communists will be able to cripple Pochentong, or that 13 a key FANK unit will collapse or the 14 Lon Nol government itself will be overthrown. Any of these 15 eventualities could bring the war to a sudden end. On the 16 other hand, timely U.S. supplemental aid might provide a 17 psychological boost to the government that would enable it to continue fighting.
